Hands

One Night Treatment

Soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients. Wear, during the night, old, loose kid gloves, with the finger ends cut off and air holes cut in the palms. For red, rough, chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, with shapeless nails and painful finger ends, this treatment is simply wonderful, and points to a speedy cure of the most distressing cases when physicians and all else fail.

Cured by Cuticura

WAS troubled with hands so sore that when I put them in water the painwould near set me crazy, the skin would peel off, and the flesh would get hard and break, then the blood would flow from at least fifty places on each hand.

Werds never can tell the suffering I endured for three years.

I tried at least eight doctors, but my hands were worse than when I commenced dectoring. I tried every old Granny remedy that was ever thought of without one cant's worth of good and could not even get relief.

I would feel so badly mornings when I got up, to think that I had to go to work and stand pain for eight or nine hours, that I often felt like giving up my job, which was in the bottling works of Mr. E. L. Kerns, the leading bottler of Trenton, N. J., who will vouch for the truth of my sufferings.

Before I could start to work, I would have to wrap each finger on both hands, and then wear gloves, which I hated to do, for when I came to take them off, it would take two hours and the flesh would break and bleed. Some of my friends who had seen my hands would say, "If they had such hands they would have them amputated"; others would say "they would never work," and more would tern away in dispust. But thanks to Caticura, the greatest of skin curus, it ended all my sufferings.

Just to think, after doctoring three years, and spending dollar after dollar during that time, Caticura cured me. It has now been two years since I used it and I do not know what sore hands are. I never lost a day's work while I was using it or since, and I have been working at the same business, and in acide, etc.

ening, bunch the windrows and cock ing. It should be put into the stack with just as little handling as possible. To avoid molding, I have advised farmers to store alternate layers of dry straw and fresh alfalfa hay together in the barn or stack. The straw need not form more than about one-fourth of the total weight. I think this method especially applicable to the first crop in localities where old straw stacks can be easily acquired.

When possible, alfalfa should be stored under a roof, as it does not turn rain well. A cheap hay shed can be built by setting telegraph poles in the ground, braced by two-by-sixes, and putting a good shingle roof on the structure. The sides should be left open and the hay stacked under this shed in ricks. A stacker of some sort or other should be used, as it does not pay to hire men to handle the hay with a fork. They waste too much by enaking off the leaves, which are considerably better to feed than wheat bran, pound for pound. Where a roof cannot be had, the hay should be stacked in high, narrow ricks and covered with long slough grass. Alfalfa should be cured and stacked, if possible, without being rained upon. No other crop is so easily injured by rain. Alfalfa hay rained upon is worth about half what it would be were it

Harvesting alfalfa at the righ time and in the right manner very largely determines its feeding value. The majority of farmers wait too long before starting the mowing-machine. Alfalfa should be cut for hav when one-fourth to one-half of the blossoms have opened. When let stand longer, many of the leaves fall off and are wasted. Mowing early stimulates the growth of the following crop. Allowing it to go to seed seemingly exhausts the plant for that season.

Alfalfa fed green, either as a pasture or as a soiling crop, has few equals in its nutritive value. In localities where there is no difficulty in getting a stand, the cheapest way to feed it is probably to pasture it. It should never be pastured until the plants are more than a year old. Owing to their liability to hoven or bloat, it is always risky to pasture cattle or sheep upon alfalfa, Before turning animals liable to bloat upon the alfalfa give them all they will eat of some other food. Death from bloat is often very sudden.

The compilation of Kansas assessors' returns, showing the value, at home or on the farm, of animals slaughtered or sold for slaughter and the poultry and eggs marketed in the year ending March 1, just completed by Secretary F. D. Coburn, of the state board of agriculture, evidences that Kansas not only is well forward but continues to rapidly advance in the rank of meat-producing states.

The value returned for animals slaughtered or sold for that purpose in the year named is $54,321,888, or 71/2 per cent greater than in 1899, and the largest value in the history of the state. For this reason the storage of apples in barrels induces better keeping, as the cool air around the fruit cannot change freely. Some follow the practice of burying the apples out of doors, and this practice is a good one if the pit is dry and is placed below the frost line. The temperature of the ground in winter is seldom likely to rise above 40 degrees at a depth immediately below the frost line. This should be an ideal temperature. In fact it is altogether probable that storage cellars constructed for the Ex-Senator Williams M. Evarts is keeping of fruit will be found easier to regulate than the best appointed house cellars.

If you have a piece of hard land to break, which is so baked as to come up in clods, we would suggest that you run over it with a disc or cutaway harrow ahead of plows, and break with very small scooters, says a southern farmer. Do not try to turn such land. If you still have clods do not wait for them to harden, but run a heavy roller or drag over and follow with some pulverizing harrow the same day. An hour or so will do this for each day's plowing. Thus you will pulverize most of them quite easily. Run roller ahead of harrow so as to crush as many as possible, and fasten the others so that they cannot dodge the harrows. It will pay to take time to do this, your crop can be cultivated so much cheaper afterwards; and the yield will be so much greater. Every time you go over with harrows and crushers you will increase the yield

We once selected one acre in a wenty acre field, average spot, and plowed and harrowed this acre fourteen times right along before we quit. We then planted and cultivated this acre just as we did the rest of the field, running the rows right along through it. The yield was much more than double any other acre. This has continued to be true for five years, in all kinds of crops. All through the growing season this acre can be distinguished as far as you can see the field. All crops grow off quicker and yield heavier. "Culture is Manure" is true. But after all the old proverb "an Desirable qualities are not the only ones that are perpetuated by inheritance. Undesirable qualities are also handed down from generation to generation to be an annoyance to the breeder. It is said that the variations are as apt to be toward deterioration as toward improvement. While in a state of nature the standard of the breed is kept up by a natural selection that we call the survival of the fittest. This not only keeps the good qualities in the foreground, but also establishes new ones that appear if they are of enough consequence to survive. When the wild birds and wild animals are domesticated it is no longer a case of survival of the fittest, for the old laws are set aside by man. Thereafter the chief factor in improvement must be artificial selection. The birds are no longer able to exercise any volition in the matter. The need, therefore, of careful study on the part of the breeder is apparent.

A sheep breeder that has had years of experience selecting and mating

If this is lacking nothing can make up for it, and it need not be lacking if the buyer is at all acquaintrecord, or who his grandfather was or wasn't, till you have seen the animal himself, and then don't let the record change your opinion of him. No matter how long a sheep's pedigree is, if don't want him. A ram should have two good ends on him if possible, but the front end is by far the most important. If there is lots of heart room, the front legs wide apart, the wider the better, and the neck short and far out of the way. Frequently a fine ram will be so wide and full in the shoulders that he will appear narrow and peaked behind, where if his shoulders were as sloping and thin as some sheep, his hips would seem anything It is a noticeable fact that the in- but deficient.
